What is Peds-21?
At the annual AAP National Conference & Exhibition (NCE), the Academy holds a premier symposium, Pediatrics for the 21st Century (Peds-21). Peds-21 is designed to address emerging issues that will affect the practice of pediatric care in the 21st century. The symposium focuses on a specific topic and features a keynote speaker of national or international stature. In 2008, the focus is on Pediatric Oral Health.

Course Objectives
- Promote collaboration between the medical and dental communities in addressing children’s oral health.
- Improve child health professionals’ understanding of the causes and prevention of early childhood dental caries, the long- and short-term consequences of dental disease, and impact of dental disease on the individual, family, and community.
- Provide information about the systems of care for the improving children’s oral health.
