

Dr. Clarice S. Law Bio

Clarice S. Law, DMD, MS is a Clinical Professor in the Sections of Pediatric Dentistry and Orthodontics at UCLA School of Dentistry. Dr Law received her DMD from Harvard School of Dental Medicine and completed specialty training in Pediatric Dentistry and Orthodontics at UCLA School of Dentistry. As a full-time faculty member at UCLA, she teaches both Pediatric Dentistry and Orthodontics to dental students and residents.

Her clinical teaching responsibilities and service to professional organizations focus on interceptive orthodontics. Most notable are contributions to the growth and development and orthodontics sections of The Handbook of Pediatric Dentistry, Practical Reviews in Pediatric Dentistry, and Pediatric Dentistry: Infancy to Adolescence. On the other hand, as the daughter of a psychologist, she has always been interested in human behavior and has made it a focus of scholarly activity. She has authored two review articles on behavior guidance for the CDA Journal and thought she was getting quite proficient in non-pharmacological behavior guidance until her own children were born, refocusing her research on the influence of contemporary parenting on pediatric behavior guidance in the dental setting.
